

Alabama

Set your local edition »

37°
5-day | Satellite

NEWS ▾ | BUSINESS ▾ | SPORTS ▾ | H.S. SPORTS ▾ | ENTERTAINMENT ▾ | LIVING ▾ |

comments

Birmingham Water Works launch enhance employee training

3

Tweet

3

Like

0

Share

Email

By Joseph D. Bryant | jbryant@al.com

on January 03, 2013 at 8:21 AM, updated January 03, 2013 at 8:26 AM

Print

BIRMINGHAM, Alabama -- The Birmingham Water Works Board recently launched a new employee development program including its 'BWWB University.'

The utility joined with the American Society for Training and Development to begin an employee development week and the BWWB University, a website designed to provide information on development and educational tools, to support professional growth.

Each day of the program provided employees with details of opportunities to develop skills and improve individual performance. For example, the website highlighted an education assistance program and leadership development programs.

"Our training team understands the importance of developing our employees to reach their full potential," said Rhonda Lewis, the utility's Training & Organizational Development Officer. "By developing our employees, we are supporting our company's commitment to providing healthy water to all of our customers."